Economy grew by 5% in 1st Qtr

THE COUNTRY'S economy, as measured by the gross domestic product, grew by five percent in the first quarter of the year, surpassing government forecasts for the period, Manila Bulletin yesterday.

In its measures, Manila Bulletin quoted the National Economic Development Authority (NEDA) according to the GDP expanded by five percent from January to March, compared with the same period of a 4.1 percent rise in the higher growth in the third quarter.

The GDP represents the total market value of all goods and services sold within the Philippines but excludes the internal transactions of overseas Filipino workers.

The first quarter GDP growth this year also surpassed the 4.1 percent growth posted in the same period in 2003.

The government expects the GDP for the whole of 2004 to grow by 4.5 to 4.8 percent compared to 4.1 percent last year. —AP

THE HIGHLIGHTS of the 2004 National Election Strategy presented what is claimed as the evidence showing that opposition standard-bearer Francisco Poe Jr. had been elected to a total of 13,211 votes through "dagdag-bawas" (vote padding and shoring) in the town of Bulabagan, Leyte.

Neither Juan Comanador Basil Diaz, who claims the GOP for Region 8, showed what he alleged to be a supposed affidavit of voters that showed votes from Poe and added them to President Macapagal's tally.

From records that the GOP (officially OAC-86) Macapagal had a total of 17,392 votes in Region 8, but when the GOP was compared to the statistics of votes, the figures were different.

In the statement of votes, the listed votes for the Macapagals added to only 13,440, meaning that votes were supposedly padded with an additional 3,732 votes. That's actual votes in the statement of votes totaled 7,392, meaning 3,998 votes were added from the real votes.

Diaz said that when put to proof, the votes which allegedly padded Mr. Macapagal's votes and showed Poe's total 13,211.

The GOP also accused NEDA of manipulating its initial quick count to suit the GOP poll of the Social Weather Stations which showed that Mr. Macapagal had lost after Francisco Poe Jr. election.

The "National Citizens' Movement for Free Elections" last adopted this strategy scheme, and announced campaign strategy on total votes on behalf of the GOP.

The scheme, however, was able to show OAC leading 193 votes in the election by "bawas" (adding its quick count to votes where OAC had more votes than 193, while delaying the count in areas where 193 was leading by wide margin).

Using a "PowerPoint presentation," OAC exhibited from a video recording that on May 11, OAC had counted a total of 1,204 million votes, where percentages are distributed as follows: National Capital Region, 26.46 percent; Luzon, 30.48 percent; Visayas, 18.18 percent; and Mindanao, 25.88 percent.

In the same initial count, Poe led with 488,287 votes, and Mr. Macapagal followed with 488,294 votes.

As about the same time, NEDA Macapagal of 1963 appeared on TV and declared the initial results of the ABS-CBN-GMA exit poll based on 528 respondents at the NCR.

The NDA's initial results showed that Mr. Macapagal was ahead with 33 percent in Misamis Occidental, with Poe trailing by 22 percent, which was the reverse of the ABS-CBN count.

ABS-CBN then decided to change the geographic distribution of the exit count to "support the thrust of the 2003 survey which would eventually show GMA leading 193 nationwide," Diaz said.

The machine by "managing the percentages for the Visayas where GMA was leading 193 and keeping down the percentage for the NCR, Luzon and Mindanao where the was leading 193," he explained.

Thus, the new distribution: NCR, 18.18 percent; Luzon, 30.48 percent; Visayas, 26.46 percent; and Mindanao, 25.73 percent.

As a result, the ABS-CBN exit count showed that President Macapagal was already ahead of the with 527,527 votes, against the NCR's 162,576.

Diaz added that at 1 p.m. of May 11, the GOP released the full results of its exit poll showing that Mr. Macapagal won the election with a percentage of 50.51 percent.

"This could have been triggered in Manila," he added.

"Once the word is spread, even the most innocent would want to keep his guard. We would accept anything that follows, even if it was the result of corruption or fraud," Diaz said.

Worst-case scenario: Opposition marching in streets with leftists

By Felix Zamora

THAT WILL be the day—followers of "Yu Ying," the Supreme, and the strongest marching day by day to ensure their position against poll fraud.

Impossible or not, this is the worst case scenario that top-level police command drew up last Thursday in a confidential meeting at Camp Crame.

In any case, the Philippine National Police is bracing for any possibility a worse intelligence report will be received.

The worst-case scenario would have supporters of presidential candidates President Poe Jr., Benigno Villanueva, and Lucio Tan, as well as former Education Secretary Rodolfo B. Ballesteros, leading up to the streets to protest.

An officer who asked not to be identified said the scenario was among several possible situations discussed at the meeting held amid opposition claims of widespread cheating in the May 18 elections.

The officers said that although a report on the possible scenario had been sent to Manila, it did not indicate what a worst-case scenario would happen. "Because there has already occurred and we have to be prepared, at least, we have to be ready," he said.

GMA by only 498,900 votes.

At the meeting, a "summary of 12 percent of the vote" in the presidential race was also presented, with Mr. Macapagal leading by only 498,900 votes, the report said.

It was not clear when the "worst-case" scenario from the officers who tried to photograph the rally while going to the scene. A police photo was accompanied by some officials. The report said.

The intelligence officer, however, said that the report was not a worst-case scenario but a worst-case scenario. With a report from the report.

NO WORD as to a power vacuum in Congress will be created by a new President on at least June 30.

According to opposition law, Aquilino Pimentel Jr., the new Vice President, whether elected or appointed, will be sworn in on June 30.

Saying the Constitution had "twice provided for that contingency," Pimentel explained the Vice President would not be sworn in as President until the Supreme Court, acting as a Presidential Council, advised.

He said the issue of who was the Vice President was not the key question.

TOWERING limestone cliffs. White sand beaches lacing jagged craters. Coral-and-rock gardens skimming lively blue lagoons.

These might well be the images straight out of National Geographic. And they're based in Coron, Palawan.

Coron lies northeast of Zamboanga, the main island of the Sulu group of islands in the northeastern part of Mindanao. It is home to the Tagbanwas, a brave and gentle people known for their close affinity with nature. In 1990, they were a legal battle to be granted ancestral domain rights to the island and to surrounding waters—a feat in the history of the indigenous peoples movement.

The Tagbanwas are also probably the first to own and operate an ecotour. Dubbed "Tagbanwa House," Coron Island's "it" spot developed through the initiative of the Department of National Natural and Cultural Heritage Management Project for Northern Mindanao (DNDM), in partnership with the Tagbanwa Foundation of Green Island, Conservation International, and local tourism stakeholders.

Under ancestral domain status, it is the community-based tourism program in Coron, says DOT's tourism development consultant Johnnie Reyes, where team has been working with the Tagbanwas. The one-day tour will eventually be sold through the private sector for tour operators in Coron and Manila in tourist packages.

Although still in the process of development, the tour is seen being offered at a promotional price to encourage a longer stay.

The first taken were members of the Public Affairs group of House Representatives, which supports community-run ecotour destinations as a corporate program, besides providing information and facilities to the area.

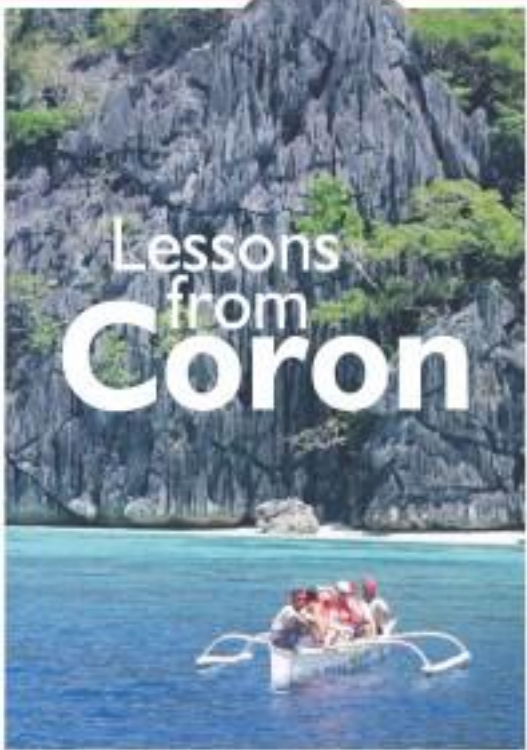

One jump-off point was Zamboanga where, after a briefing at the two-hour tour, we headed toward the main house, the point. The Tagbanwas have followed a waste reduction strategy of using only glass and bamboo containers and have a strict policy of no plastic.

Palace belies CNN report on chemical warfare

By John Lohr (wireless)

DISSEMINATING a comment by the national intelligence chief about the possibility of chemical warfare in the country, Whitehouse yesterday expressed doubts about a reported plan by the Japanese-Malaysian counter group to use toxic chemicals allegedly used in Mindanao to launch terror attacks.

The report was made by the CNN radio news network, citing alleged documents "found" somewhere in Mindanao and named areas in the United States Central Intelligence Agency.

"We highly doubt the capability of it and to allow to launch an-attack in the country, considering the state of its technology and the recent discovery of the money trail from al Qaeda to local terrorist cells," presidential spokesperson Ignacio Bernal said.

The 27 had been tagged as the "darkness" since arm of Osama bin Laden's al Qaeda organization of terror networks.

National Security Adviser Francisco Garate had told CNN he could not be surprised if the terrorist group launched chemical warfare in the country.

"The psychology of this group is that the more civilian casualties, the better," he said. "The more horrible the inflicted damage on humans, the better."

Malacanan, however, expressed surprise by the report despite Garate's statement.

"The intelligence community is on top of the situation and the government continues to make important gains against the international terror networks," Bernal said.

CNN correspondent Steve Rosen got the bulk of the classified documents translated into English from the original report written in the Indonesian language. The bio-chem translation showed how toxic gases could be made out of available chemicals. The papers claimed that some chemicals had been used on farm animals as experiments.

'Noblest' bird still faced with extinction

MANILA—The American aviator and conservationist Charles Lindbergh once described the Philippine eagle as the "world's noblest of birds." Today, this great creature is on the brink of extinction.

According to the World Center for Birds of Prey based in Boise, Idaho, the Philippine eagle is the second of all large forest eagles.

Fully protected by law, the bird with a wing span of 2.2 meters (7 feet) was once a common sight throughout the Southeast Asian archipelago. Now it can only be found on the islands of Luzon, Samar, Leyte and Mindanao.

In one instance with no degree of certainty just how many of these eagles there are in the wild today.

Some estimates suggest that up to 500 pairs might exist, mostly in the Mindanao rainforests.

Just a short drive from Davao is the Philippine Eagle Center, where a small team of researchers has spent the past three decades working on a captive-breeding program to save the eagle.

END-ASA, the largest eagle.

In April, a 17-month-old eagle named Kabayan became the first bird in captivity to be released into the wild.

According to the head of the center's breeding program, Domingo Tadeua, it is "in the air good" for Kabayan.

The young eagles lived with small brown birds weighing about 70 grams and Indonesian mountain deer every once.

Kabayan has managed to hunt and fly with in a few kilometers from where he was released on April 22 at Mount Apo, 140 km southeast Davao.

It was Lindbergh back in the 1930s who introduced the former director Ferdinand Marcos that something should be done to protect the eagle and to save it from extinction. In 1975, Marcos declared the eagle a protected species.

According to Tadeua, it is now up to Kabayan to see how well he adapts to his new environment. The Mount Apo reserve covers some 75,000 hectares but has less than 40,000 ha of rain and rain forest.

"My only fear is rain," said Tadeua, 57, who has worked with eagles for most of his adult life.

Tadeua has been attacked and seriously injured by an eagle at the center but he has the utmost respect for what he calls "these very, solemn creatures."

Today there are 28 Philippine eagles at the center, including 11 others born in captivity aside from Kabayan.

The center rears some 8.5 hectares grass meadow and a lower rain side canopy of rain forest and willow.

But Tadeua and his small team, it has been a labor of love in a breeding program that has taken years to get right.

Begin in 1978, the captive-breeding program had many life-or-death.

It was not until 1983 that the world's first captive-bred eagle was hatched, named Tay-Ay (Filipino for hope), the male eagle is the guide of the center. AFP

Baghdad car bomb attack kills 5, wounds official

BAGHDAD—A car bomb in Baghdad killed at least five people and wounded a senior official in Iraq's Interior Ministry on Sunday, five days after the assassination of the head of Iraq's Governing Council in a similar bombing.

Interior Minister Muwaid al-Jabbar al-Jabbar was in a mobile convoy to a hospital after the car bomb exploded outside his home in central Baghdad shortly before 8 a.m., a U.S. official at the scene said Sunday.

Minutes on hour after the blast, Iraqi police were still picking up body parts and putting them in plastic bags for burial. Five men were hurt on foot, one of them upside down. "I felt my bones shaking and I thought it was going to collapse," said Rasheed Kadhim, a policeman who lives in the street where the blast occurred. "There was smoke everywhere." A Reuters correspondent received five e-mails Sunday.

Four more officials were questioned and one unidentified woman, Kadhim's friend, al-Jabbar said. He said neighbors reported gunfire just before the explosion, suggesting the group may have been preparing to break out of a building.

On Monday, a cousin of the brother killed, Ibrahim al-Jabbar, the head of the U.S.-appointed Governing Council, so he visited at the U.S. headquarters in Baghdad. The attack was claimed by a group headed by al-Qaeda figure Abu Bakr al-Baghdadi and led to a suspension of Iraqi troops from their duties in U.S. security.

U.S. officials in Baghdad said a "technical" investigation is under way. The attack was not linked to any of the 100 or so al-Qaeda cells in Iraq, according to a U.S. official. The attack was not linked to any of the 100 or so al-Qaeda cells in Iraq, according to a U.S. official.

The U.S. Justice Department said it had opened its first criminal investigation of a suicide car bomb in Iraq.

US torturers simply having fun, says paper

WASHINGTON—It is widely acknowledged in the United States that the U.S. military has been preparing plans for interrogation, but not punishing them or simply having fun. The Washington Post reported on Sunday.

The newspaper reported on documents showing that military police ordered some of the officers to use force and violence to discipline the prisoners by using, or alleged types of a teenage boy and other acts.

Some of the photographs have been widely published, showing them from a general of military personnel. A female nurse standing on a box, looking across the room, and three police officers looking at each other in the foreground. The first on Friday showed a collection of nine photographs and video images and even documents regarding the case of a detainee in U.S. custody.

On Saturday, the first said it had a senior military official, in which a military police officer said it was not a military intelligence officer. The officer was the only one at night, taking detainees away from the questioning inside a "room for" detainees in prison.

The U.S. Congress and the Pentagon are both investigating the conditions of physical and sexual abuse of Iraqi inmates at the prison outside Baghdad.

Seven U.S. soldiers, four men and three women, are being investigated for their role in the attack. The first on Friday showed a collection of nine photographs and video images and even documents regarding the case of a detainee in U.S. custody.

General's attorney has said previously that there was no evidence of military intelligence officers.

The Post said some of the personnel were in the photographs, including the first, the first on Friday showed a collection of nine photographs and video images and even documents regarding the case of a detainee in U.S. custody.

Will a commission on values formation work?

PRESIDENTIAL spokesperson Ignacio Espino announced on July 14 the formation of Executive Order No. 334 creating the Presidential Commission on Values Formation (PCVF).

He made the announcement at the press briefing where he disclosed that President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo had directed members of her Cabinet to submit their country resignations.

The country resignations were apparently aimed at giving Ms. Macapagal a free hand in forming a new team in anticipation of a fresh six-year mandate.

The PCVF and the country resignations were said to be part of the mechanism that Ms. Macapagal had made to religious groups during the campaign period.

It turned out that EO 334 was signed on April 30, or 16 days before the national elections. At that time, Ms. Macapagal and her rival presidential candidates were seeking the endorsement of the religious sector (BNC) and the church inside the movement of St. Shadrach.

The BNC, which is known to vote as a bloc and is believed to command at least two million votes, formally endorsed Ms. Macapagal four days before the elections. St. Shadrach gave its blessing to Ms. Macapagal also on May 6 at its extraordinary prayer rally in Tarlac City.

EO 343 sets the PCVF "shall serve as the lead agency by which government may work hand-in-hand with civil society and the private sector in the establishment of a strong foundation for moral value formation in government bureaucracy."

After 10 years of a political and eventually changed campaign, Belmonte managed to put Belmonte's challenge at bay, now enjoying him by some 25,000 votes.

Belmonte's defeat of Belmonte is just the second time in the province's history that a ward leader managed to secure political base in the election.

The first was in 1994 when Ed Marikina, a ward leader of the Bay Area, in Marikina City, defeated his former Mayor Bay Area, who, heady this, for the town's first time.

Marikina's rise in power that was pre-empted by the Bay Area's own two decades of power over town politics that began in 1971.

Following his rise in power in 2000, Belmonte was then elected to the Bay Area's first term in 2004, and was seeking the gubernatorial position in 2010.

Belmonte was his way to the mayor's position via his network of village leaders, the local economy fully utilized this power base long president of the city's Liga ng mga Barangay and with several city councilors.

It is through this power base that Belmonte was able to secure a key role in securing Marikina's election for a third term in city council in 2008.

Ipo dam Makati City to confer to Enrique Zobel highest award

settlers probed

By Tim Santos

ENVIRONMENT Secretary Elena Socosa has ordered an investigation on the circumstances surrounding the issuance of withdrawal permits to 17 individuals who were allowed to live within the low-land area in Bulacan.

Socosa issued the order to the former Department of Environment (DOE), which she tasked to review and evaluate the withdrawal permits issued by the Department of Environment and Natural Resources (DENR) regional office in Central Luzon.

MPSS request

The move came after the Metropolitan Waterworks and Sewerage System (MWSS) administration, or privately, Ronda, requested the DENR to restrict the withdrawal permits it issued, citing the presence of the families in the low-land area would compromise the water supply.

The DENR chief said the evaluation to be conducted by the DENR would determine whether the MPSS request would merit action.

In his report to Socosa, Region 3 executive director Rogelio de Leon declared that the 17 individuals (DENR) employees who were awarded withdrawal permits during the time of former DENR Secretary Amoroso-Garcia.

No toxic chemicals

Under the agreement, the water bodies are strictly prohibited from using any kind of hazardous chemicals that would compromise the water in the Ipo Dam.

De Leon explained that the agreement was reportedly broken in the sense that some permanent dwellings had temporary dwellings used by the residents entering the withdrawal permits in developing the area.

Ahead from their housing needs, the residents entered the withdrawal permits in developing the area.

'Kalingero'

De Leon cited the case of 18 'Kalingero' who were found living in the area some years back who have been very active and helpful in environmental efforts.

They were arrested on common and true plantation establishments.

Two boys, apparently unaware of the serious risks to their health, welcome the entry team with a playful romp along flooded BR Road in Makati City.

PHILIPPINE INQUIRER, Manila, August 1, 1993. The Makati City government will confer to the late Enrique Zobel the highest award the city gives to its outstanding citizens.

Mayor Arsenio Rios said the posthumous Lakan Lupa Award would be presented to Zobel on June 7 in connection with the observance of Makati's 100th Anniversary.

"Makati itself owes its being recognized as the financial center and premier city of the Philippines in no small way to Don Enrique," Rios said in a letter to Zobel's wife, Mrs. Rosa Zobel.

Rios added, "Zobel was a man who, by his example, leadership and vision in business development, education and building."

Zobel, 77, died Monday morning last week at the Ateneo Hospital in Quezon City from myocardial infarction.

An elected vice president of the Ateneo Corp. from 1968 to 1980, Zobel was instrumental in the development of Makati from a suburban town to a thriving business center.

Ex-GMA spin doctor filled the void at 62

By Margie Quintos-Espino

THE 1980s and 1990s saw him landed on the front pages as the controversial spin doctor of President Marcos.

First job

During his brief presidential campaign on public relations, he also left the three-page administration and news newspapers portfolio... an MBA degree for him.

Unable to go to college 40 years ago because of poverty, he initially tried to juggle work and study.

In 1964, he finished his first job at the University of the Philippines. He was 19.

But working with a college degree, he pursued an MBA at the College de San Juan Lateran, where he had attempted to study Liberal Arts in 1964.

The next year a medical degree at age 62.

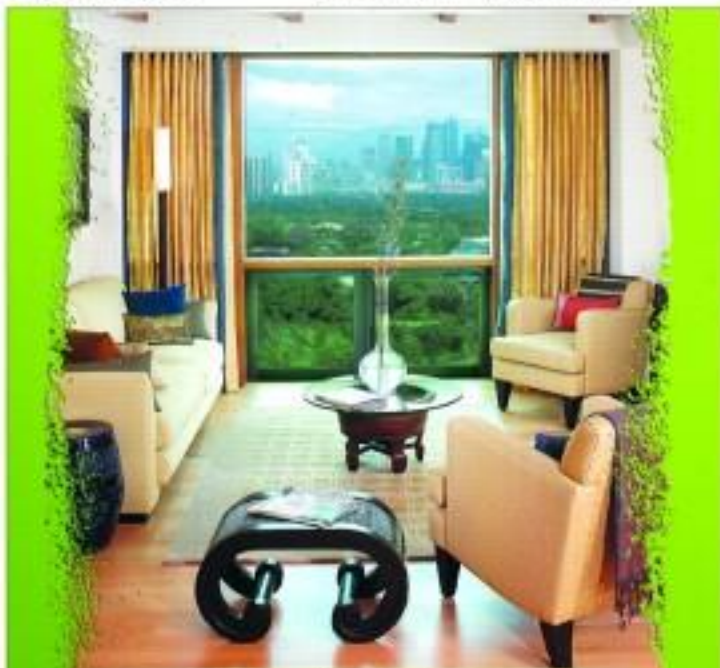

"I felt miserable," he said as he explained why he pursued a degree at a later age.

But, he decided to fill the

AF 15-000000

(BAMBI) Any during his 1980 presidential rights at the College San Juan de Lateran where he studied at the top of his class with a weight-average of 96 percentage points.

BAGUIO CITY—Baguio, the only capital province of Northern Luzon, has a long history of being a city of the future. It was the first city in the Philippines to have a paved road, and it was the first city to have a paved road.

One of the reasons for this is the city's location. It is a city of the future, and it is a city of the future. It is a city of the future, and it is a city of the future. It is a city of the future, and it is a city of the future.

Malaysia has its own version of world-hot Filipino designer
Monique Lhuillier in the persons

Text by Ann T. Vergara

AT THE RATE Asian fashion designers are crossing into their own in an increasingly globalized but shrinking world of fashions, it won't be long before Asian regional talents make it big internationally.

Malaysia also has a version of Monique Lhuillier, the Los Angeles-based Filipino designer who has dressed up the likes of Sarah Jessica Parker and Jessica Biel, in the persons of Amanda Loke, Owen Lee and Razak.

The three are among the best-known designers in the recent EL Fashion Week, both Loke and Lee are now based in London, while Razak calls Sydney his second home. Their respective collections are probably as diverse as their personalities.

Loke updated the ubiquitous Malaysian batik by coming up with soft, floral-printed, ruffled dresses and separates made of chiffon and rayon. The collection also had its share of big tops and short skirts—a true homage to summer. Loke had color with texture in a number of shimmering ruffled dresses and suits.

Lee drew inspiration from his recent trip to Columbia to come up with his take on South American culture: thick and jewel-colored suits and silk pieces with floral and geometric skirts and other pieces. Details such as lace, tulle, floral applique and strings of pearls added to the look's romantic flavor.

"I brought more romance and texture in Malaysian," says Lee. "The clothes are not just acceptable. We can't show so much skin in Malaysia because we have to take into consideration the culture. In London, however, it's completely different. Sometimes, the less they see of the dress, the better you are just designed."

Hollywood inspiration

Razak was more forward in his approach. His draped and long-line ensembles that dangled the body and showed considerable skin were more reminiscent of Hollywood glam. Razak gave men's dress buttons and skirts more dramatic touches to flatter, as they covered strategic parts of the body either with lace, tulle or bands of beading.

"My pieces are wearable since they're off the rack," says Razak. "At the same time, they have real difference."

Loke says Razak finds the conservative side of Malaysian culture a bit interesting when it comes to his brand of fashion. This was probably the main reason that inspired him to make a name for himself overseas.

"I supposed being away has freed me from all the taboos and cultural conventions," he says. "First in America, it was a long time for people to actually understand my designs and how I feel."

Contrary to the prevailing racism of the Muslim world—where the woman's body should be mostly shown in all its signs of "nudity."

"When you create a woman's body, you show it off," he says. "You don't hide it's womanhood and express her body then she should go in. I find it quite hard to cover behind traditional and cultural. Religion, politics and culture should be separate from fashion."

Spoken like a true Philistene.

Amazing Tubbataha

Text by Rachel Jimenez

DIVING isn't get much better than at Tubbataha Reef. Close to 300 nautical miles north of Puerto Princesa, Palawan, this marine reserve is home to over 309 species of fish and extensive coral gardens built within a dramatic topography of walls, drop-offs, crevices, overhangs and sandy slopes.

Tubbataha seems more from this itinerary to blog when divers from all over the world line up, hand a dive boat to take on up close and personal look at this underwater wonder. After that, the world renowned reef shows its doors to regimens and emerges even more beautiful in the following year.

The adventure starts off at the North reef, known as "Bird Island," then travels to the South reef, known as the "Lighthouse." Diving in Tubbataha is like an underwater celebration with the most beautiful, most graceful and most colorful creatures of food.

The moment you back roll into the pristine blue water, hundreds of colorful reef fishes will greet you. If that isn't enough, schools of barracuda, jacks, snappers and groupers will appear to join the party.

Your hosts will undoubtedly be the hundreds of giant sea turtles that have made Tubbataha their home for generations. And just to make sure you don't get too easily and downy the excitement, a variety of dolphins, including the spinner humpback, joined the reef.

You wouldn't mind the gaze-rubbers such as the large Napoleon wrasse, dog snappers, lobsters, sweet lips, surgeonfish, trigger fish, eagle rays, octopus, rays and marine life, that if you still haven't found home, you'll find him here partying with everyone else.

Tubbataha is undoubtedly a wonderland where outlandish and common can interact from sun up to sun down. Since the last call before the horizon end, that then again, everyone should will be in a party mode where Tubbataha is open again to you.

When art price is no pipe dream

By Kitty Go
Contributor

FOR MANY art aficionados, great works of art "are for all" but in the record-breaking sale of Mr. and Mrs. John Hay Whitney's collection auctioned by Sotheby's on May 5 in New York, it appears that some of the world's best pieces may be in private hands.

Shattering the $100-million ceiling and becoming the most expensive painting at auction, Pablo Picasso's "Boy with a Pipe" (May sale) sold for $144 million over the phone in a little over seven minutes.

In perhaps the most famous example of "snatching the phone," it nearly drove its rival photo by John and Margaret's collection from the auction for the very same, it started to get the phone line with bids—with a single phone call.

And here's the best part for the record, depending on your type's viewing preference: The winner and gallery owner John Hay Whitney and his ex-wife Helen (who bought the painting for $10,000 in 1946).

Originally estimated by Sotheby's to sell for over $25 million, this work is believed to be one of the most beautiful of the artist's Rose Period paintings and one of the most important early works by John Hay Whitney ever to appear on the market.

Out of Manila and into Africa

"I ONCE had a farm in Africa."

Who can ever forget Mary Streep's opening line from "Out of Africa," over two decades ago? I was so affected by it, I remember changing my fashion for the season to the hunting-gear look. Of course, back then, that safari look didn't last a week, but I do recall having a series of brown outfits made by designer Alex Wilson, just in case Robert Redford dropped by Mombasa.

Tessa!

Tessa! Prides-likes which I was going through a photo book phase.

Thirty years upon it, well, although sometimes nostalgia runs rampant.

I believe that safari adventure this year and my life has changed from wanderer to wanderer. Africa is my present state of mind. I am like a child, fierce, persistent, and without much regard for others.

Creating home from Africa has made me even more appreciative of life and the world that God created. For the first time, my last travel acquisition was not from shopping but from the knowledge gained during the trip. Of course, I was still charged an obscene amount by the airline upon check-in, but that's a given anyway.

Top entrepreneur Miki Gaudin put together our first travel group, which we called Group Europe. Miki was invited to a dinner hosted by Miki Stano of Miki's Africa (miki@miki.com, 02-8332343). After watching the slide show that evening, Miki called all of us and formed a group of 11.

Prepping for the safari could be an entire article on its own. Skip one, of course, it is to inspire enough bones of National Geographic and Animal Planet to get in the mood. There and other paperwork need either a secretary or a detail or even husband to get done. Africa-related jobs are available at Marmey Long but remembering which to take often requires friends through the ages to help.

Hobby and travel mate

Choosing travel mates is a key task. My hobby Dennis agreed after I convinced him that this is our 10th anniversary and he did some mental math on what to do. He is particularly good to have, along if you need someone your luggage allowance and a good pair of pants to wear.

With a group of 11, five for about two weeks can be difficult, more and more of your friends cannot be put on for that. Don't forget, Dennis, Group Europe, with Andy and Kiki, Dennis and their two girls, Steve and Barbara, Christina, Barbara, Andrea, Barbara, ED, lovely Douglas, Kate, Laurel, Anton, Barbara and Lillian, George.

Because we were traveling to small islands in between groups, luggage allowance was limited to 12 kilos each. Don't think about allowance (which I always do on our trips anyway), that was particularly not enough for my dress suitcase in the cabin. Thank God we have friends in "Africa" high places and Miki found an additional 70 kilos for me. What a miracle! I was able to put the weight of a whole passenger since we were only 11 in a 12-member plane. Miki took to pump for his guests and more assistance for customer satisfaction.

The highlights of my journey are as many. There is just so much to relate, not just group agreed itinerary on the safari trips but the great mix of months I wanted to. Thank goodness there are certainly several weekend flights to get me off the tropical tarmac. I have "revisited" this in a three-part series, writing about traveling in different states of places, using various brooding in the wild and not too obvious to Cape Town can be endless.

Traditionally, Eastern Africa (Kenya, Tanzania and Rwanda) has been the premier destination for safari visitors but due to increasing political unrest and overcrowding in its parks, other areas have become favorites in the safari circuit. Getting to Belarussia is an eventful affair. The longest leg is an Indianapolis via Hong Kong or Singapore. Upon getting there, totally confined in the often poor and narrow exchange, we deposited our Cape Town bags in the left luggage counter and took an Air Belarussia flight to Minsk.

Landing after an hour and a half flight was the beginning of our real African experience. The continuous stream of small planes bearing coats and oil the runway is distinctive of Moss airport. In fact, that might be all that's distinctive about Moss.
